Chapter 1

The La Porte 2020 Comprehensive Plan is a 20-year master plan intended to serve as an official public document, adopted by the City Council, to guide policy decisions relating to the physical and economic development of the community. In general, the plan indicates how the community desires to develop and redevelop over the course of the next twenty years. The comprehensive plan is a physical plan, it is long-range, it is comprehensive, and it is a statement of the goals, objectives and policies of the local government. The comprehensive plan is slightly utopian and also inspirational, enough to challenge the future of the community; but it provides clear direction through specific statements of action to achieve the desired results envisioned by citizens and the leadership of the community.

Through Chapter 219 of the Texas Local Government Code, the Texas Legislature provided the following guidance to cities toward maintaining long-range development plans:

"The powers granted under this chapter are for the purpose of promoting sound development of municipalities and promoting public health, safety, and welfare."

State statutes enabling long-range urban planning by Texas cities also leave it up to these municipalities to determine what topics will be covered in their plans. Chapter 219 advises that a comprehensive plan may:

1. Include but is not limited to provisions on land use, transportation, and public facilities;
2. Consist of a single plan or a coordinated set of plans organized by subject and geographic area; and
3. Be used to coordinate and guide the establishment of development regulations.

The comprehensive plan is organized into 14 individual plan elements, each addressing the existing conditions, issues, goals, objectives, and action plans for a particular facet of the community.

The plan elements are arranged as follows:

DEVELOPMENT OF THE COMPREHENSIVE PLAN UPDATE

Citizen involvement is the cornerstone of the comprehensive plan. Effective mechanisms for the involvement and debate of citizens were an essential part of the planning process. Through extensive community involvement, the comprehensive plan study incorporated the community's values in terms of quality of life, character and scale of development, urban form, aesthetic appeal, and how new development should be integrated with the existing and future city fabric. The plan includes a vision with specific goals and objectives which assesses the opportunities and challenges facing the City, identifies important policies, strategies and actions to be taken, and sets priorities for an aggressive implementation program that emphasizes practical results.

The process required to update a comprehensive plan is often more valuable to the community than the plan itself, both for small and large cities, since the plan is ultimately only a snapshot in time. The planning process involves major community decisions about how much and where the city will grow, what the nature of that growth will be, and whether the community can afford to provide the necessary public services and facilities to support this growth. This can lead to charged discussions about what is "best" for the community and how everything from taxes to "quality of life" could be affected.

The La Porte Comprehensive Plan Update is the result of countless hours of consideration and input from the community's residents and leaders. Key participants in the development of the plan update included:

- ?? an appointed Comprehensive Plan Steering Committee, supported by the City's administrative management and City Council, whom provided overall review and monitoring of the planning process and acted as liaison between the City's Boards and Commissions and the Consultant Team;
- ?? key stakeholders and leaders in the community who offered their insight and suggestions toward the development of the community vision and the goals and objectives of the plan;
- ?? local agencies such as the Texas Department of Transportation, Harris County Flood Control District, Port of Houston Authority, Harris County Public Infrastructure Division and the Union Pacific Railroad, who offered their future development plans toward the future physical and economic development of the community;
- ?? the La Porte Planning and Zoning Commission, who is the appointed group of citizens responsible for developing and administering the Comprehensive Plan; and,
- ?? the Mayor and City Council, who as the City's ultimate decision-making officials were involved at key stages so the resulting plan would fulfill their expectations and requirements.

Frequent meetings between various members of these groups and the planning consultant were held to discuss and develop the various aspects and direction of the plan. The Steering Committee was involved in a thorough process of identifying issues, discussing alternatives and solutions, and determining needs and priorities. The Planning and Zoning Commission, in coordination with the Steering Committee, performed a key role in making the decisions and choices that shaped the form and detail of the plan that was eventually recommended to the City's elected leaders. As the City's chief governing body, the City Council concluded this process by adopting the updated Comprehensive Plan and directing city government to abide by its policies and carry out its recommendations.

ABOUT THE LA PORTE COMPREHENSIVE PLAN UPDATE

Planning draws the attention of the local legislative body, appointed boards and commissions, and citizens to the community's major development problems and opportunities – whether they be physical, environmental, social, or economic. A plan gives elected and appointed officials in particular an opportunity to step back from their preoccupation with pressing, day-to-day issues and clarify their ideas on the kind of community they are trying to create by their many specific decisions. The planning process provides a chance to look broadly at programs a local government may initiate regarding housing, economic development, provision of public infrastructure and services, environmental protection, and natural and manmade hazards and how these concerns may relate to one another. A comprehensive plan represents a “big picture” of the community, one that can be related to the trends and interests of the broader region as well as the state in which the local government is located.

A comprehensive plan contains many components and serves numerous functions such as providing information, identifying existing conditions and characteristics, and establishing local governmental policies and strategies. The plan is the definitive source of information regarding the existing and future conditions and characteristics of the community. It contains several elements addressing population, housing, land use, transportation, economic development, public facilities and services, and implementation. Each plan element provides a wealth of information to serve as a solid foundation for future decision-making relating to community growth and development. A thorough understanding of the community's past, present, and future is needed to formulate realistic goals, viable objectives, workable policies, and effective action plans.

The essential objectives of a comprehensive plan are as follows:

- ?? It is a plan to guide the future physical development and redevelopment of the community;
- ?? The time frame is long, extending over a twenty-year horizon;
- ?? It encompasses a large geographic area including the corporate limits and ETJ of the community;
- ?? It is general in nature, allowing some issues to be resolved and many decisions to be made;
- ?? It articulates ideas in a framework of goals and objectives, policies and actions, and plans and projects;
- ?? It is intended foremost, to serve as a continuing guide to decision-making, to provide a common direction, and to provide stability as issues are addressed and future decisions are made.

The comprehensive plan should not be confused with zoning. The plan is a general guide for the long-range growth and development of the entire city. Zoning is a legal mechanism enacted by the City whereby specific parcels of land are classified as suitable for particular land uses. The plan provides the legal justification for development regulations but has no practical effect on its own in the absence of such regulations. As stated in Chapter 219 of the Texas Local Government Code, a municipality may define, in its charter or by ordinance, the relationship between the comprehensive plan and development regulations and may provide standards for determining the consistency required between a plan and development regulations. The La Porte Comprehensive Plan Update provides the vision, goals, objectives, policies and actions necessary to achieve the City's desired urban form over the long term. Zoning is a tool used by the City to influence and direct development on individual properties on a much shorter-term basis so that, taken together, these developments will result in the type of community that La Porte desires.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE OF LA PORTE

Planning is the process of establishing goals and objectives, and determining the means by which these ends may be achieved. It is a dynamic process that must be continuously monitored and renewed as changes occur. A Comprehensive Plan is long-range, general, focused on physical development, and comprehensive in relating physical development proposals to the basic policies of city government. The city's comprehensive plan must be flexible in responding to changing conditions and needs, yet steadfast in its vision and support for the community goals and objectives.

Local planning draws the attention of the local legislative body, appointed boards and commissions, and citizens to the community's major development problems and opportunities--whether they are physical, environmental, social, or economic. A plan gives elected and appointed officials, in particular, an opportunity to back off from their preoccupation with pressing, day-to-day issues and to clarify their ideas on the kind of community they are trying to create by their specific decisions. The local planning process provides a chance to look broadly at programs a local government may initiate regarding housing, economic development, provision of public infrastructure and services, environmental protection, and natural and manmade hazards and how they relate to one another. A local comprehensive plan represents a "big picture" of the community, one that can be related to the trends and interests of the broader region as well as the state in which the local government is located.

Local planning is often the most direct and efficient way to involve the members of the general public in describing the community they want. The process of plan preparation, with its attendant committee meetings, workshops, community forums, and public hearings, permits two-way communication between citizens and local government officials as to a vision of the community and the details of how that vision is to be achieved. In this respect, the plan is "a blueprint of values" that evolves over time. Local planning results in the adoption of a series of goals and policies that, ideally, should guide the local government in administering regulations like zoning and subdivision controls, in the location, financing, and sequencing of public improvements in the community, and in guiding redevelopment efforts. In so doing, it may also provide a means of coordinating the actions of many different agencies within the local government itself. Apart from these reasons from the local government perspective, local planning also has direct benefits to the private sector by stating its intentions as to its physical development and infrastructure investment, which sends a signal to the private landowner.

There is a multitude of reasons why cities should plan. Among them are to:

- ?? Maximize community strengths and minimize community weaknesses;
- ?? Protect property rights and enhance property values;
- ?? Provide adequate public facilities and services;
- ?? Balance economic growth with quality-of-life issues; and,
- ?? Avoid unmanageable concentrations of population.

A CONTINUOUS PLANNING PROCESS

The La Porte 2020 Comprehensive Plan is a principal part of the City’s overall planning process, which involves all facets of the community. The plan is only one important element of the overall current and long-range planning program. The plan represents an important first step toward achievement of the vision and desired goals of the community.

The plan is not considered to be a static document, but rather is the result of a continuous process to gather, evaluate and make informed decisions based upon constantly changing conditions. As such, the plan is intended to be reviewed annually, and updated at frequent intervals to maintain its accuracy and applicability to current conditions and characteristics of the community. At a minimum, the plan should be updated every five years to ensure that it reflects the true vision and direction of the community.

THE LA PORTE PLANNING AREA

Location

La Porte is located in the eastern portion of Harris County, Texas, adjacent to Galveston Bay, approximately 20 miles from downtown Houston as shown on Figure 1.1 – La Porte Planning Area. It is accessible from the west by State Highway (S.H.) 225, Spencer Highway, and Fairmont Parkway. From the north, it is accessible by S.H. 146, and from the south by S.H. 146, South Broadway, and Bay Area Boulevard. La Porte is in close proximity to the neighboring towns of Deer Park, Pasadena, Morgan’s Point, and Baytown.

Climate

The La Porte area has a generally warm but pleasant subtropical climate. The City’s coastal location means that the Gulf of Mexico has a major influence on its weather patterns. Prevailing southeasterly Gulf winds make for warm summers and mild winters. Abundant rainfall is typically produced during the year when cooler air pushes in from the north and mixes with Gulf air. The average annual rainfall is 45 inches, and snowfall and freezing temperatures are rare. The mean temperature in La Porte is 69 degrees Fahrenheit, ranging from a typical daily high in the low 90s during the summer to a common 65-degree temperature during the winter months. The area’s annual growing season lasts 309 days, and trees, flowers and other vegetation thrive when annual rainfall is on target and well distributed throughout the year.

History

La Porte is one of the oldest cities in Harris County. The city was developed as a new town by a group of investors from Ohio headed by I.R. Holmes, a Colorado developer, who in 1891 began developing the town at Five Points in the heart of today’s most established area of the community. The promoters named the town La Porte, which means “the door” in French. In 1892, the City was incorporated and in the following years various hotels were developed in order to attract people to the new bay town. In 1896 the developers were acquired by a Galveston banking firm, but in 1898 Holmes attracted additional investors and established East La Porte, which flourished until the Spanish American War and his death. In 1915, East La Porte was destroyed by a hurricane, but Old La Porte was thriving due largely to the popularity of Sylvan Beach Park. It was not until after World War II that La Porte began to witness additional growth of the petrochemical industry.

The history of La Porte is also described in The Romance of Old Sylvan Beach by Erna B. Foxworth as follows:

“The Galveston and Trinity Bay area of the coast of Texas was taking shape in the 1880’s after years of struggle and planning by the founders and promoters. A land boom in the 1890’s brought people from many northern states to what was extolled as the “new Gulf city” named La Porte, a French term which connotes its location as a door or gateway. Early visionaries dreamed of a port of entry for the region...

When La Porte incorporated in 1892, a portion of 22 acres was reserved as the town-park. It was an inviting waterfront place in a grove of shade trees, a rarity since the rest of the region was mostly prairie land...

Promoters of the town arranged for a booth at the Chicago World’s Fair of 1893 and sold lots sight unseen while conjuring up other ideas to attract still more settlers. Homesteaders at first came by boat as there were no roads, but soon they were coming by railroad, which in the beginning extended only as far as Deer Park, ten miles away. That meant they had to hire buggies to take them to La Porte. But come they did, and excitement abounded.”

In recent years the industrial sector has continued to flourish in and around La Porte, which has brought steady residential growth as well as expansion of the commercial retail base. The population has grown substantially from 7,149 persons in 1970 to an estimated 32,822 persons in 1998. With the growth have come new residential neighborhoods, transportation enhancements, parks and recreation improvements, and a variety of other opportunities and challenges. Perhaps the most significant influences on the physical and economic development of La Porte are the major highway improvements including S.H. 225 and S.H. 146 and the completion of the Fred Hartman Bridge over the bay, but also continued development of the Port of Houston’s Barbour’s Cut container terminal and the recently approved Harris County referendum to develop a new Bayport container terminal at the southern boundaries of the community. These developments will continue to play a role in the history and future of La Porte.
